

LARSEN AGREES TO SAVE BIG SUM ON NEW TRAILER

"You are Not a Drayman," He Tells Shingle, and Then Tells His Own Information

"You are not a drayman, Mr. Shingle, you are a man of the financial world, while I, my dear friend, am a drayman."

Softer than the falling of dew upon the leaves of a kukui tree fell these words of information from the lips of Supervisor William Larsen last night, to settle upon the minds of his fellows on the board.

Mr. Larsen's own mind was upon tractors, the subject having been brought up by Mr. Shingle in a request from the board for some $1500 for the purchase of a "bull dog trailer" to attach to the tractor owned by the city.

"Shucks," said Mr. Larsen as the communication was read. "Shucks, Mr. Shingle, I can tell you that you haven't money enough in your department to spend in the purchase of a bull dog trailer or any other kind of trailer at any price as that."

Mr. Shingle thought differently, and said so, for the benefit of Mr. Larsen and other members of the board.

"I'd like to know," insisted Larsen, "just where you got the idea of spending any $1500 on a trailer like that?" Says Belser Told Him.

"Jack Belser told me," said Shingle, "that it would be impossible to fix up a trailer for our tractor any different from the one we propose here."

"Yes," said Larsen, "I might have thought so. Does know that man Belser has already copied half the things I have invented? Not that I object to his copying them, but he does at any rate. You ask Mr. Belser tomorrow who made that trailer he uses, and that winding-up affair he also has in use. They are copied after my own original ideas."

"Well," said Shingle, "Larsen seems to think he can fix this up. I won't say that I think he can, but I am willing to give him 10 days in which to prove it. I want some results at the end of the 10 days, however."

"You'll have them," snapped Larsen, "big tractors—that's my middle name, and I guarantee you a two-wheeled contrivance that won't cost you more than $100, and won't stick in the mud like the Hakkala. I guarantee you that."

This passed one of the most interesting features of the evening. In another case, however, with the bringing up of the rules of procedure toward the close of the session.

It was time for their third reading, and some of the supervisors, having failed to keep in close touch with the technicalities of the office had forgotten that the important process was slated for the evening.

What Old Logan Say? More than one of the "seven wise men" looked nervous, and Supervisor Logan, holding down the chair in the absence of the mayor, mumbled something unintelligible behind his mustache.

"I move for a recess," said Supervisor Ahia, harking back to the school boy days of yore, but he was quelled by his request by Hollinger, who flashed at him a look of scorn through the hazy air.

There was much nervous fidgeting of the big rules manuscript by more than one of the board members. "Larsen might do well to look at the clause which provides for punishment by the board of any member guilty of disorderly behavior," said Shingle.

"And you, Mr. Shingle," Larsen came back, "you might do well to read the clause which says no member may talk for more than 10 minutes on any subject."

"And any member who transgresses, shall be reprimanded by the chair," said Shingle, "and shall immediately sit down."

"Anyway," said Mr. Shingle, looking at the clock, whose hands were pointing to 10:30, "anyway I think we could look and look, and always find something we might be opposed to. In general I believe the rules are all right. I move we adopt them."

Then the seven, in the absence of the mayor, laid aside their objections and accepted their fate. The vote was unanimous.

BEGIN DRESSMAKING CLASSES ON FRIDAY

Classes in business English and Spanish at the Young Women's Christian Association have held their first sessions, and the classes in French and dressmaking will hold their first sessions Friday night. Competent teachers are in charge of all classes, and an effort is made to meet the individual needs of each pupil enrolled. Arrangements have been made whereby a sewing machine at the Home-stead will be at the disposal of members of the class in dressmaking outside of class hours in order to meet the needs of women living away from home who do not have the use of a machine at their own rooms.

HOW TRAFFIC OFFICERS MAY SECURE SHELTER

Combined Shelter and Semaphore.

A combined shelter and semaphore for traffic officers, the design of a traffic officer of Jacksonville, Florida, is considered by Traffic Officer Oliver R. Akau about the best thing yet for the crossings guardians. He has furnished the Star-Bulletin with the accompanying description of the device:

"After years spent in unraveling traffic tangles, a crossing policeman in Jacksonville, Fla., has devised a semaphore that goes straight ahead, but vehicles that are to turn the corner as well. This device consists of two pairs of right-angled set at right angles to each other, one pair being red with the warning 'Stop' displayed in large letters, and the other pair white, with the word 'Open.' These boards are mounted on a vertical shaft which is turned back and forth with a handle. Screened lights illuminate the semaphore arms at night. These are supplied with current by a storage battery, which also operates the bell that gives warning when the semaphore is being turned. The rule in using this semaphore is that the center line of the intersecting street cannot be crossed if the red is set against the vehicle. A driver coming up to either the red or white signal is free to turn to the right, but can only turn to the left when given the white signal, as this involves crossing the center line of the cross street.

The letter follows, in part: "On assuming my duties as governor, I noted more or less agitation in the public press on the subject of the temporary detention of boys among mature arrests."

"The unnecessary duplication of institutions is a serious economic problem, and, with the great deficiency threatening the territory, it became necessary to act with intelligent prudence."

"To inform myself of the actual situation I promptly visited County Sheriff W. P. Jarrett and inspected the jail. This I found to me in most excellent condition, sanitary and clean. I found separated from and at a distance from the jail yard a large, clean, freshly whitewashed cell, capable of accommodating several boys. This was assigned exclusively to the use of boys detained pending parole, transference to the probation officer or determination of their cases."

"As the probation officer was directed to look after special cases, by taking such boys to his home, I found little justification of the view taken by the press or specialists in harrowing public feeling."

DETENTION HOME PLAN IS FROWNED ON BY GOVERNOR

That the newly appointed members of the board of industrial schools guard against duplication of work and overhead charges in the maintenance of the two institutions on Oahu, as well as against sentimentalism which encourages parental irresponsibility, is urged by Governor Pinkham in individual letters which he has written and sent to each member of the new organization.

By an act of the last legislature the control of the boys' and girls industrial schools was taken from the board of education and placed with a newly created board. The governor recently appointed the following to compose the board: Judge W. L. Whitney, ex-officio; four years, Miss Bertha Ben Taylor, Mrs. Arthur L. Andrews and Mrs. F. W. Macfarlane; two years, Prof. A. F. Griffiths, Dr. C. B. Cooper and Rev. Father Valentin Francks.

Governor Pinkham begins his letter with data and information regarding the two industrial schools. He points out that on June 29, 1914, there were 130 boys in the boys' industrial school, and 89 girls in the girls' industrial school, making a total of 224 in the two institutions.

The letter follows, in part: "On assuming my duties as governor, I noted more or less agitation in the public press on the subject of the temporary detention of boys among mature arrests."

"The unnecessary duplication of institutions is a serious economic problem, and, with the great deficiency threatening the territory, it became necessary to act with intelligent prudence."

STAR-BULLETIN CLIPPING GOES TO MAGAZINES

Referring to his plan for introducing the Hawaiian types of girls to the magazine artists of the states, Director A. P. Taylor of the Hawaii Promotion Committee said this morning: "I am taking up this plan seriously, for I think that it may mean an enormous amount of indirect advertising for the islands. If you can interest a person with a picture first you can get his serious attention later. I think that if the mainland artists could see the collection of 'Gurrey Types,' indicating the distinctions between the American Hawaiian, Russian Hawaiian, Chinese Hawaiian, and so forth, they would immediately appreciate the value of this new and almost untouched field for their efforts. I am forwarding the clipping concerning my plan, which appeared in the Star-Bulletin yesterday afternoon, to many of the magazines throughout the states."

As one of the last measures in the campaign of publicity for Hawaiian Pineapple Day, the Promotion Committee is issuing this week a leaflet on Hawaiian pineapples which will be sent out in large numbers to the best business houses for inclusion in their letters to the mainland. It is expected that in this way several thousand new people will be reached with news of the big event of November 10.
